

NEWINGTON, Conn. – The Connecticut Public Transportation Commission (CPTC) will hold a public hearing in Fairfield on (Tuesday, May 21) to give citizens and local officials in that area of the state an opportunity to voice their views on public transportation services.

The hearing will take place at 7:30 p.m. at Independence Hall, 725 Old Post Road, Fairfield, Connecticut.

This is one of a series of four public hearings being held this spring throughout the state in metropolitan areas designated by the CPTC. These hearings will enable members of the CPTC to gain firsthand information and input from the public concerning existing and proposed public transportation services within Connecticut.

The CPTC is particularly interested in receiving comments from public officials and private citizens on such issues as:

1. The Region's Rail Commuter Parking Facilities and Expansion
2. Funding Issues for Regional Public Transportation
3. Possible New Fairfield Railroad Station
4. Transit Oriented Development (TOD) Concept and Implementation
5. High Speed Ferry Service Proposal for Bridgeport-Stamford-New York
6. Feeder barge service to Port of Bridgeport
7. Other transit topics of interest to the public.
